APSI announces the addition of James H. Warder as the company's Chief Financial Officer.

Scott Coulter, CEO of Alliant Personnel Solutions, Inc. has announced the addition of James H. Warder as the company's Chief Financial Officer.

"Mr. Warder joins us after serving as a consultant to our organization through the Mike Minter Workforce Development Program. As we have begun to experience exponential growth of our Fiber Optic and Broadband training initiatives, we felt it was time to bring someone with Mr. Warder's depth of experience to our team."

APSI specializes in training displaced workers and students in Fiber Optic and Broadband technologies providing certification and licensure to their graduates who are then able to seek and gain employment with some of the most recognized companies in the nation including AT&T and Time Warner Cable, among others.

Warder has been serving with Minter Consulting for the past two-and-half years and has worked with a number of different clients including APSI, Monarch/The ARC of Stanley County, and Teamwide Solutions among others. Prior to that, he owned his own business consulting firm in Charlotte with a wide and diverse base of companies that he assisted. Since moving to Charlotte seven years ago, he has also become very involved with the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce and was an area director for Business Network International.

Before moving to the Piedmont, Warder lived in Daytona Beach, Florida where he was the Regional Manager for the largest independent mortgage broker in the area and also served as the Executive Officer for the local home builder's association.

Warder, who holds degrees in journalism and public relations, is also a writer having written articles for Cabarrus Business Magazine, Lake Norman Business Magazine and Working Charlotte. He also assisted in writing Mike Minter's autobiography and was commissioned to write the recently released Hercules of the Revolution, a novel about a Revolutionary War hero whose exploits have faded into the past.
